

The New York City Veterinarian

March, 2018
Volume 59, No. 1

President's Message

My esteemed colleagues, It is with great honor that I introduce myself to you as this years President of The VMA of NYC. Although I have been a member of the board for only four short years, I have remained a member of the city association for the better part of two decades, and in that time have been fortunate enough to forge wonderful relationships with many of you. For those I do not know, and for our newest members, I look forward to meeting you. In addition, I pledge to all members that the board and I will continue to work hard to provide you with strong representation in our community and continued excellence with regard to our continuing education program.

As many of you know, our organization is coming up on our 125th year of existence, and even though I wanted to have this years slogan to state: "Make The VMA of NYC Great Again," the fact of the matter remains that we are, already, a really remarkable group. However, we do strive to become even better as we are always on the look out for fresh faces and new ideas. Therefore, I encourage all our members to consider volunteering and serving, at some time, as a board member. Or if that is not an option, perhaps consider coming in early for lecture, one afternoon, and sit in on one of the board meetings. They usually begin at 4:30 and all voices are welcome.

Keep Your Business Protected While Working with Volunteers and Students

Creating educational opportunities for students and future veterinarians is a tradition in the veterinary profession. Keep your business protected by following these tips and maintaining business insurance coverages that include students and volunteers.

Educating Practice Visitors

In the veterinary profession, animal contact is a major cause of insurance claims, and even the best trained employees can become injured on the job. With this in mind, it is important to be aware of the risks when untrained students and volunteers are in the practice, and especially if they are working with animals...

Business Insurance Coverages and Other Considerations

It's important to have the right business insurance coverages and practice proper safety consistently. Although every claim is unique, veterinary businesses can take precautions to avoid these situations and protect the business...

Training or Behaviorist?

Ellen M. Lindell VMD, DACVB
Veterinary Behavior Consultants
Ph 845-473-7406
www.lindellvetbehavior.org
info@lindellvetbehavior.com

VETERINARY BEHAVIOR
CONSULTATIONS, P.C.

Behaviors that concern pet owners are serious. Automatically. Whether the behavior is normal or abnormal, if your client is concerned, the human animal bond is in jeopardy and the pet is at risk of losing his or her home or life.

Without taking a detailed history, it can sometimes be difficult to immediately determine whether a behavior is normal or abnormal. Remember, behaviors are simply clinical signs. It is up to a veterinarian to assess and diagnose before determining a course of treatment. Treatment options may include referring to a trainer or a veterinary behaviorist.

To whom should you refer? Here are some guidelines to help you through.

The role of the veterinary behaviorist

Most veterinary behaviorists offer a range of services including well-care, preventative and diagnostic consultations. Consider a referral to a veterinary behaviorist when:

1. The behavior is complex with an underlying medical basis.
2. A full assessment is needed to determine a diagnosis and prognosis.
3. The patient exhibits anxiety that is affecting the quality of life for the client and pet.
4. The patient exhibits aggressive behavior that puts a person or animal in harm's way.
5. There are multiple behavioral concerns threatening the human animal bond.
6. A dog has attended a training class but is not responding as the owner had expected.

The role of the dog trainer

An excellent dog trainer is a valuable resource. A trainer can help your client teach his dog important skills including manners and how to follow cues or commands. Some trainers have pursued higher level training and are able to design behavior modification plans for dogs with mild fear or low level, context-specific aggression. Consider a referral to a skilled trainer when:

1. You have taken a history and determined that the dog is physically healthy and is exhibiting a normal but undesirable behavior.
2. You are comfortable that no person or pet is at risk of being injured—the dog is not exhibiting serious aggressive or self-injurious behavior.
3. Your client would like her dog to have good manners.
4. You have assessed the patient and determined that the patient exhibits a low level of fear or anxiety that could be managed with behavior modification.

Selecting the right trainer for your practice

Dog trainers are not subject to licensing guidelines, and credentialing for dog trainers is not standardized. The terms "certified" and "behaviorist" are not very revealing as they are not associated with any specific educational background. Two well-regarded certifications are CPDT-KA and KPA-CTP. Be sure to select a trainer who understands learning principles and who uses state-of-the-art, humane training methods.

A note on CAABs

A Certified Applied Animal Behaviorist, or CAAB has received certification from the Animal Behavior Society. CAABs have extensive training in research and in evaluating behavioral problems and applying behavior modification but are not licensed to recommend or prescribe medication or to evaluate underlying medical conditions that affect behavior.)

East Village animal hospital with space to rent out to a veterinarian. We have a large commercial 3000 square foot space that is operating and approved for small animal veterinary medicine and surgery in the East Village. Our animal hospital is fully equipped for surgery, x-ray, dentistry, and also contains a pharmacy and pet food shop. We're looking for someone to rent part of our space as we have only two veterinarians and there is space to share. This would be especially useful for a board certified veterinarian looking to build a practice around their specialty and build a clientele base in the East Village as well as veterinarians with mobile clinics who seek a home base. We are happy to discuss different ideas and exchange cases that might be mutually beneficial. Rent will be reasonable and dependent on the number of hours/ space required. If interested, please send your CV and details of what you are interested in to : veterinarianinquiry@gmail.com .
