PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

Dr. John Lu

Dear Colleagues

It seems that the timing of our impending celebration could not be better. The viral flu season is gone with a breeze and the wind of political unrest is also somewhat diminished with Mueller Report. This is truly a moment to rejoice: in the spirit of rebirth that is the promise of spring, we veterinarians, with our families and friends, will soon join together to celebrate the 140th anniversary of our beloved association, the VMANYC.

It was only two lifetimes' ago, in 1879, that with shared love and compassion a group of veterinarians assembled together. The purpose: to form an association dedicated to the wellbeing of companion and farm animals. Just imagine practicing in an era fifty years prior to the development of Penicillin. By today's standard of care, our founders were equipped were simple veterinary techniques, but with abundant love and compassion to treat their sick animals. The seeds of shared love and compassion still remain, and have been complemented by astounding leaps forward in knowledge and technology.

Today our troops of veterinary colleagues around the world are carrying out state of the art cancer therapies, advancing novel techniques for cardiac valve transplantations, and guarding human health from lethal zoonotic diseases. We are playing an indispensable role in our society of health practitioners. We have so much to be of proud of vis-à-vis our profession!

That is why we are assembling this April 13th: to celebrate our accomplishments, commemorate our fellowship, and reinforce our commitment to improve the welfare of animals and to promoting the human-animal bond that is the driving force of our livelihoods.

VMANYC celebrates its 140th birthday only once. Please register to join us, via our email invitation, for this celebration gala held at One World Observatory. I am looking forward to seeing you soon.

Warmest regards,

John Lu, DVM

Dr. John Lu—VMA NYC President

Q1. Where did you grow up and when did you move to New York City?

I grew up in Beijing, China, moved to NYC in 1990.

Q2. Why did you become a veterinarian and when did you know you would become one?

One of my childhood friends died of rabies. I was wondering at 12 years old, maybe I should become a veterinarian. I went to veterinary school when I was 17 and became a veterinarian when I was 21.

Q3. Where did you go to veterinary school?

In 1982 I attended Beijing Agriculture University School of Veterinary Medicine.

Q4. What was your first job as a veterinarian?

I was working on molecular research and teaching Genetics in Beijing University.

Q5. Where do you practice now, and how long have you been there?

I run three practices, all located in Queens. I have been there for 8 years.

Q6. What pets do you have?

Small animals and some exotics

Q7. What are your hobbies/interests?

Painting and collecting art.

Pets and Antibiotic Resistance

Overview and Updates

Antimicrobial/antibiotic resistance can affect the health of people and animals. Antibiotics are an important tool to treat some diseases caused by bacteria, but using antibiotics inappropriately can lead to the development of germs that are resistant to the drugs commonly used to treat them. These antibiotic-resistant germs can spread between people, animals, food, and the environment. The more antibiotic-resistant germs there are, the harder it is to treat serious infections in people and animals.

Antibiotics should be used responsibly in people and animals, including pets, to help prevent more antibiotic-resistant germs from developing. Use antibiotics only when needed, and follow the instructions given by your healthcare provider or veterinary professional. Talk with your healthcare provider and veterinarian about responsible antibiotic use to keep people and pets healthy. Using our antibiotics appropriately means we preserve them for future use to fight diseases.

About Antimicrobial Resistance

Antibiotic resistance happens when germs like bacteria and fungi develop the ability to defeat the drugs designed to kill them. That means the germs are not killed and continue to grow. Infections caused by antibiotic-resistant germs are difficult, and sometimes impossible, to treat. In most cases, antibiotic-resistant infections require extended hospital stays, additional follow-up doctor visits, and costly and toxic alternatives.

Antibiotic resistance does not mean the body is becoming resistant to antibiotics; it is that bacteria have become resistant to the antibiotics designed to kill them.

Antibiotic Resistance Threatens Everyone

Antibiotic resistance has the potential to affect people at any stage of life, as well as the healthcare, veterinary, and agriculture industries, making it one of the world's most urgent public health problems. Each year in the U.S., at least 2 million people are infected with antibiotic-resistant bacteria, and at least 23,000 people die as a result.

No one can completely avoid the risk of resistant infections, but some people are at greater risk than others (for example, people with chronic illnesses). If antibiotics lose their effectiveness, then we lose the ability to treat infections and control public health threats.

Many medical advances are dependent on the ability to fight infections using antibiotics, including joint replacements, organ transplants, cancer therapy, and treatment of chronic diseases like diabetes, asthma, and rheumatoid arthritis.

Brief History of Resistance and Antibiotics

Penicillin, the first commercialized antibiotic, was discovered in 1928 by Alexander Fleming. Ever since, there has been discovery and acknowledgement of resistance alongside the discovery of new antibiotics. In fact, germs will always look for ways to survive and resist new drugs. More and more, germs are sharing their resistance with one another, making it harder for us to keep up.

Bond Vet is creating the next generation of veterinary clinics, built completely from the ground up. Our clinics are warm, friendly, with specific attention to design. This won't feel or look like a clinic you've worked in before. We also have a very strong focus on technology (built by our own in-house software engineers). This means we can innovate on ways to help improve the veterinary team, pet, and client experience. Think 'no more note-taking' or 'staying late to call owners as a thing of the past'. Yes this sounds futuristic, it is. One of our biggest and most important focuses is on our team. We are working and will continue to work immensely hard to create a fantastic workplace culture. It's important every team member feels appreciated and valued every day. The only way our industry will continue to push ahead is by creating a wholesome clinic, ensuring that it's a wonderful place to learn and grow. We are a fast-growing group of individuals, with a strong core team. We wake up everyday determined and passionate to fulfil our vision of strengthening the human-animal bond through pet health. Great benefits (16 week parental leave, catered meals every day, fantastic health coverage etc.). You'll learn that we don't skimp out here. We help each other and support each other. Mentorship is our priority. Our team members are never alone and we tackle challenges and questions together. We spend time on self-improvement and actively prepare our team for growth throughout their career. Compensation 100- 140k. We want individuals that are not just team players, but also team leaders. If you're excited about joining a practice that wants to elevate the veterinary industry, send us your application!

East Village animal hospital with space to rent out to a veterinarian. We have a large commercial 3000 square foot space that is operating and approved for small animal veterinary medicine and surgery in the East Village. Our animal hospital is fully equipped for surgery, x-ray, dentistry, and also contains a pharmacy and pet food shop. We're looking for someone to rent part of our space as we have only two veterinarians and there is space to share. This would be especially useful for a board certified veterinarian looking to build a practice around their specialty and build a clientele base in the East Village as well as veterinarians with mobile clinics who seek a home base. We are happy to discuss different ideas and exchange cases that might be mutually beneficial. Rent will be reasonable and dependent on the number of hours/ space required. If interested, please send your CV and details of what you are interested in to: veterinarianinquiry@gmail.com.
